Commentary

The Company's pre-tax NTA increased by 4.6% during January. This represented underperformance of 1.0% compared to the benchmark S&P/ASX Small Ordinaries Accumulation Index which increased by 5.6%.

The S&P ASX Small Ordinaries Accumulation index returned a very strong 5.6% in January, in sympathy with global markets. Markets returned to a risk-on stance after commentary from the Fed suggested they were "listening to the markets" and were likely to hike only a further two times this year. Additionally, the Fed Chairman was quoted as saying he "wouldn't hesitate" to adjust the pace of the Fed's balance sheet contraction. Within the benchmark – growth and momentum style names led the charge – after having been sold off heavily in the final quarter of 2018. Paradoxically we think we are heading into a pretty weak reporting season. The Australian economy has undoubtedly slowed and the cyclical side of the economy – retailers, housing related stocks and media – have all come under pressure.

The smaller companies segment has continued to see vigorous takeover activity with the Company seeing the benefits from two of these in January. Early in the month Healius (HLS.ASX) – formerly Primary Healthcare – received an unsolicited takeover offer from Jangho group at $3.25 a share. The Board rejected the offer as being too low, which we agree with. We suspect given the strategic nature of the assets (second largest Australian pathology operator) that it will attract the interest of other parties. The takeover attempt another indicator that the public market is not recognising the long term value of many strategic assets, particularly in the healthcare sector. The BGH Consortium (consisting of the Navitas founder, BGH Capital and Australian Super) also raised its original offer for Navitas (NVT.ASX) from $5.50 to $5.825 and received the blessing of the Board as a result. To date M&A activity has been confined to the larger end of the small cap spectrum, which has left many smaller and micro companies trading at very low multiples relative to the market and their historical levels.

Other strong contributors to the Company were Mt Gibson (MGX.ASX) – up 21%, Invocare (IVC.ASX) – up 18% and Technology One (TNE.ASX) up 13%. MGX has performed strongly on the back of a strong rise in the Iron Ore price and is close to completing the re-opening of its Koolan Island mine after the pit wall collapse of 2014. Its high-grade Iron Ore achieves a premium to spot prices due to the low impurities. Invocare similarly recovered in January after a torrid year in 2018 which saw a reduction in death rates following a very benign flu season (regrettably for the broader community a factor that is likely to prove temporary). IVC is also in the middle of a major revamp of its sites with a $200m investment. Unfortunately, this refurbishment is accompanied by a short-term reduction in volumes. While these factors have hurt near term earnings and the share price, they have also provided the Company with the opportunity to acquire a remarkably consistent business and an enviable generator of free cash flow (93% average cash flow conversion over the last 14 years). Finally, TNE continued its rebound after last year's first half share price sell off. A greater recognition of the strengths of shifting to a SaaS style business model and greater confidence in the medium-term sustainability of Technology One's growth plans has seen a continued re-rate of the shares.

Commentary (continued)

Most of the negative relative contributions in January came from shares the Company didn't own. Beach Energy (BPT.ASX), Afterpay (APT.ASX) and Wisetech (WTC.ASX) all rose over 20% in January. Platinum Asset Management (PTM.ASX) declined 7% as the market extrapolated recent underperformance of its funds. This has been the second bout of poor relative performance for the manager in the last three years. There is some risk it loses support of consultants and clients, particularly given the major team change last year. In saying that investment performance for any fund manager does wax and wane. PTM's bet on Asian sharemarkets and its underweight to the USA, although intuitive (from our perspective), has not panned out to date. We share the medium to long term view that Asia (particularly China) is the better relative investment. We therefore believe it is simply a matter of time before PTM finds its investment performance groove again, but we understand the short to medium term risk from potential client outflows could compromise that equation.

The broad market rally in January saw the momentum and growth style names re-rate to levels they were at prior to the sell-off in October last year. Having said this, there are now some interesting opportunities opening up in the highly cyclical segments of the small cap market that have taken a beating over the past six months. We think there is scope for good returns in the medium term in some of these names. A significant valuation gap has also opened in the microcap end of the market. To give some sense, the S&P ASX Emerging Companies Accumulation Index (Microcaps) has underperformed the Smaller Companies benchmark by 15.1% over the twelve months to 31 January 2019. The Company's ability to invest in this end of the market should serve investors well as we have generally observed these gaps close over time as equity investors, Corporates and Private equity capital gets attracted down the cap spectrum on account of the relatively more attractive returns.
